> in the meantime, and it seems that in this renewal of the past there was a palpable sign that in spite of the years gone by the same sentiments of sympathy unite the by their greatness, the marvel and admiration of the world," he said, "and we, after a century of glorious and painful struggles, are beginning to place the destinies of the French democracy under the shelter of the republican institutions. Nowhere, however, at any point on the globe, do the interests and ambitions of the two countries clash, and every day brings a fresh development in their commercial relations. Eighteen months ago we signed a treaty of commerce in Washington, and we have reason to hope that the United States Congress and our parliaments will consecrate by their vote this new instrument of peace, "I do not regard the United States as a > powerful branch detached from the past century. In the new humanity which the Americans already constitute we find the blood and spirit of the old races, of the old European races, which are mingled together, and I ask if there is not something of the French women, even the Parisienne, in the incomparable charm of the American woman. In reality you Americans do not merely carry forwardyou create. And the coupling of the names of President Loubet and President Mc-Kinley in one toast marks the common ideal which our two nations pursue. May they ever be united.'

> Mr. Gowdy, speaking in response to the toast, "The Day We Celebrate," said that Thanksgiving day was to the Americans a fete of religion and patriotism. "It stamps religion upon our Nation," he continued, "with security as positive and definite as the state itself. A grateful heart will be a true heart. A grateful people will be a successful people. Thanksgiving day with the Americans is not a selfish fete. We are akin to the whole world, a people of every people, a nation of every nation. We crown our success with good, kindly feelings towards the homes of our fathers. We rejoice that the cordial relations between France and ourselves have been strengthened and trade increased, but while thinking of our own country let us not forget the welfare of France, whose hospitality we enjoy and who always extends to us such cordial welcome and such fraternal greetings." Hanna as a on the senator to-day at his office to present the same. President Gallagher, of the club, acted as spokesman. In a speech he told why the club members believe the senator has well earned the exalted honor of being chief executive of the United States. The speaker referred to Mr. Hanna as the the House and Senate, in charge of the Hercules of the Republican party. "If Mr. McKinley had been defeated," he said, "Senator Hanna would have been held responsible. The victory was a remarkable one, although not unexpected, and the credit lay with the man who is entitled to

The reception accorded the committee by Senator Hanna was most cordial. In replying he laid stress upon his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him and said: I believe in my heart that I have only done my duty to the country-to my peo-ple. I seek no public office and I seek no reward. Although I deeply appreciate the feelings expressed by my neighbors and thought of.'

Bryan Says the War Will Go On.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 28 .- In answer to a congratulatory address presented by the Bryan Home Guards some days ago, W. J. Bryan this evening sent a letter to H. F. of esteem and concluding as follows:

"When a political party meets with reverses the greatest consolation the candidate has, aside from the approval of conscience, is the knowledge that he retains the confidence of those with whom he was associated, and I thank the guards for this assurance. The contest between Democracy and plutocracy will go on, and those who believe in the Declaration of Independence and the doctrine of equality be-fore the law must still defend human rights from encroachment of greed.

Work on the Lincoln Monument.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 28.-Col. J. 8 Culver, who is rebuilding the national Lincoln monument, has completed the exterior work on the monument, which is now twenty feet higher than formerly. The statuary was placed in position to-day. Marble floors have been laid on the inside, but the walls are not finished. It is uncertain when the bodies will be removed from the temporary vault to the new re-ceptacles in the monument.
